Dear PJM Board of Managers:

I write about the need to protect Kentuckians by improving PJM governance and the importance of retaining the self-supply option of the Fixed Resource Requirement (FRR).

Governance reform in PJM is necessary to ensure that decisions reflect reliability needs, affordability concerns, and the diverse policy preferences of the states whose citizens ultimately bear the costs. States must have a meaningful seat at the table.

FRR election in PJM enables states to plan responsibly, secure the right amount of reliable resources in advance, and avoid both unnecessary procurement and cost volatility for families and businesses. It ensures that sufficient generation is in place to keep the lights on and meet the demand of new growth. FRR also preserves the longstanding principle that states retain jurisdiction for decisions over resource adequacy.

I look forward to continuing to work with PJM to improve transmission, resource adequacy, and electricity system governance in our region to fulfill our shared responsibility to deliver reliable, affordable power to the citizens of Kentucky.

Sincerely,
